Meet the MBA Class of ’26: Evan Christenson

January 14, 2025

Evan Christenson (MBA '26)
Norwalk, Connecticut
LinkedIn

Evan Christenson is an innovative leader who has helped students secure over $20K in scholarships through esports at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities and developed future stars during his tenure at WWE. He excels at transforming complex data into actionable strategies that drive business growth. With a career that bridges research and business, he believes in the power of volunteering and hopes to become more involved in the hands-on work that New Orleans requires to succeed. His goal is to continue his work connecting the business world with the communities that make up New Orleans and the greater Gulf Coast Region.

What is a fun fact about you?
I play ice hockey and am president of Tulane's Ice Hockey Club.

Why are you pursuing your MBA?
To workshop soft skills.

What attracted you to Freeman?
The entrepreneurial success of alumni. Plus, all the success stories I'd heard on the Out to Lunch podcast.

Where do you hope to be in five years?
Running my own business.

What do you like to do in your space time?
Volunteer, play ice hockey, play pickleball, play cello and travel (I've been to 45 states and 12 countries).

Learn more about the Freeman School's full-time MBA program.