NPR: Examining the effects of drilling moratorium

June 22, 2010

image file

From NPR's All Things Considered, June 21, 2010:

NPR's Michele Norris spoke with Eric Smith, associate director of the Tulane Energy Institute, about the drilling moratorium's potential impact on the Gulf Coast economy and what the government can do to improve safety on rigs drilling in deep water.

To listen to the entire segment, visit NPR.org.

http://www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyId=127991878