On June 1, the Freeman School hosted a delegation of 50 representatives from Chinese universities as well as officials from China’s Ministry of Education.

The visit, which Tulane hosted at the request of the Commerce Department, was part of a trip to the United States to build connections and learn more about educational opportunities for Chinese students. The Freeman School coordinated the delegation’s visit to Tulane, which included a tour of the uptown campus and presentations in Goldring/Woldenberg Hall II about the university’s programs in business, engineering and architecture.
